One of the curiosities in England present is the old convict ship, Success, trying to locate the counterfeiters for which has recently been converted into a museum, or into what a foreign jourunlist style "a chamber of horrors." She was built 110 years ago, and her first years were spent in cruising between the East Indies and England. In 1829 the British admiralty bought and stationed her in the waters of western Australia. Capt. Stirling was then in command, and from his Scottish birthplace the town of Perth in Australia takes its name. From 1817 to 1851 the Success plied between London and East Adelaide. On her last trip she had on board several hundred immiganute who intended to seek their fortunes in the newly discovered gold fields. During the voyage the captain, the other officers and the entire crew became seized with the same gold fever and the result was that when land was reached they, too, left the ship and went off to seek their fortunes. The Success was next used to transport criminals of the deepest dye to Van Diemen's Land, as Tasmanin was then called, and she also served as a floating prison for especially dangerous criminals. The vessel then became popularly known as "The Hell of the Ocean," a title which was evidently deserved. Old records show that some awful scenes took place on her. The prisoners' cells were in two tiers under the deck, and were so small that inmates could hardly move in them. Moreover they were so fashioned that they could be made light or dark, and the most inaubordinate prisoners were always placed in the latter. These curious cells, many of the old instruments of torture, and a number of wax figures representcriminals are now being ex hibited on the Success, and are attracting a crowd of sightseers. The old ship is at present in Leith Harbor, in Scot-

"Chawin' Terbacker."

An old Missourian from one of the brush districts of Saline county was a witness in the circuit court in Marshall last week, the Index says. White wait ing in an ante-room he polied from his! pocket a chunk of tobacco rix suct elong, two inches in diameter, and perfectround and smooth, and as hard, aimest as flint. After he had cut off a chew a man who had watched him asked him what it was." Terbacker," he answered. "Yes I know; but what kind is it?" "My own kind." "Where do you buy it?"

I make it myself."

In response to a great deal of questioning the old man told his story of how the roll of tabacco was made. "Fost and fo'most," he said, "you must have good upland homegrown leaf terbacker an' cure it in the sun. Then you stem it, takin' out all the stalks. When you're ready in the fall to make up your year's supply of chewin' terbacker, you saw off hickory log and bore a hole in one end about a foot deep with a two-inch auger. You have your leaf soaked in honey and peach brandy; or, if you haven't any peach brandy, apple brandy will do. You put your soaked terbacker leaves into the two inch auger hole in the hickory log and ram it down till the hole is nearly full. Then you take a hickory Services every Sunday morning and plug made to fit the hole, and drive it in as tight as you can with a maul. This mashes the terbacker into a solid chunk. 3rd Sundays at 11 a. m., and the 2nd and Then you put the green hickory log on the fire and let it burn slow till it is Preaching at Nickell's Grove on the heated all through and the sap begins to log off then and put it out of doors to cool over night. The next morning you split the log open, and there's your chawin' terbacker that will keep as hard as leather in any climate; and it is the sweetest chaw in the world. There never was no store terbacker to hold a candie to it for a sweet, lastin' chaw." Several tobacco chewers standing around sampled the old man's home made plug, and declared that it was the best they had ever tasted. In the old days that's the way the fust settlers in Missouri made their chawin' terbacker,

Success and Failure. If by success we mean the full accomplishment of an end, the actual reaping of a harvest of results, then it is undoubtedly true that the higher and nobler the purpose the rarer will be the success. If we aim to relieve a man's hunger we can quickly succeed in the easy task; but if we aim to inspire him with a desire to earn his own bread the work is more difficult and the success far more problematical. If we would restrain a theif from robbery the prison bars and locks insure success; but if we would make an honest man of him our task is a complex one, and success may be afar off. We undertake to teach a child to read; with requisite effort we accomplish our task, we are successful. but if we aspire to raise the educational standard of our community how arduous the task, how uncertain the result, how questionable the success! The low man sees a little thing to do, Sees it, and does it; The high man, with a great thing to pur sue, Dies ere he knows it. Is his life, then, a failure? No; let us never imagine that any high purpose, any noble thought, say generous em tion, any earnest effort, is ever lost. We may never witness its growth, we may not live to gather its fruit, or even to see its blosoms; but we may eafely trust that somewhere and at some time the harvest will be abundant, and success. Feeding the Sparrows. A curious sight may be witnessed in Hyde park, London, usually on Sanday afternoon, This is the feeding of the sparrows by an idividual who appears to be on the most intimate terms with them, for the birds follow him, chirp at him, and not only fly close to him to catch the bread which he throws into the air, but will actually settle on his hand and eat there. The secret of tie success, no doubt, lies in great patience on his part, and the gradually grownup habit of expecting food from him on the part of his feathered friends, but also the noticeable deliberation of his movements, and especially the rigidity of his arm while offering the food. Chicago
